

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE WESTERN DISTRICT OF MICHIGAN
NORTHERN DIVISION

STEVEN D. BAILS, JR.,

Plaintiff,

v.

Case No. 2:09-cv-53
HON. ROBERT HOLMES BELL

MICHIGAN DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS, et al.,

Defendants.

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

Plaintiff Steven D. Bails, Jr., an inmate at the Earnest C. Brooks Correctional Facility, filed this pro se civil rights action pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 against Defendants Michigan Department of Corrections (MDOC), Warden Greg McQuiggin and Resident Unit Officer Unknown Scott. Plaintiff alleges in his complaint that on an unspecified date, he felt the symptoms of a seizure, so his bunkmate pushed the call button to alert corrections officers. Defendant Scott came to the door and asked why the call light had been pushed. Plaintiff told Defendant Scott that he was having a seizure. Defendant Scott told Plaintiff that he was dying and that he would be getting a ticket for pushing the button and walked away. Plaintiff claims that Defendant Scott violated his right to medical treatment for his seizure. Plaintiff seeks to have the court investigate the situation on his behalf and prove that his statements are true. Plaintiff claims that Defendants' actions violated his rights under the Eighth Amendment to the United States Constitution.

Plaintiff's complaint was initially dismissed by the court on April 9, 2009, for failing to state a claim. (Docket #7 and #8.) Plaintiff filed an appeal and on February 12, 2010, the Sixth Circuit affirmed the dismissal of Defendants Michigan Department of Corrections (MDOC) and Warden Greg McQuiggin, but reversed the dismissal of Plaintiff's claims against Defendant Scott. (Docket #15.) Presently before the Court is Defendant Scott's Motion for Summary Judgment, pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 56. Plaintiff has filed a response and the matter is ready for decision.

Summary judgment is appropriate only if the moving party establishes that there is no genuine issue of material fact for trial and that he is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56©); Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322-323 (1986). If the movant carries the burden of showing there is an absence of evidence to support a claim or defense, then the party opposing the motion must demonstrate by affidavits, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, that there is a genuine issue of material fact for trial. Id. at 324-25. The nonmoving party cannot rest on its pleadings but must present "specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial." Id. at 324 (quoting Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e)). The evidence must be viewed in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 251-52 (1986). Thus, any direct evidence offered by the plaintiff in response to a summary judgment motion must be accepted as true. Muhammad v. Close, 379 F.3d 413, 416 (6th Cir. 2004) (citing Adams v. Metiva, 31 F.3d 375, 382 (6th Cir. 1994)). However, a mere scintilla of evidence in support of the nonmovant's position will be insufficient. Anderson, 477 U.S. at 251-52. Ultimately, the court must determine whether there is sufficient "evidence on which the jury could reasonably find for the plaintiff." Id. at 252. See also Leahy v. Trans Jones, Inc., 996 F.2d 136, 139 (6th Cir. 1993) (single affidavit, in presence of other evidence to the contrary, failed to present genuine issue of fact); cf. Moore, Owen, Thomas & Co. v. Coffey, 992 F.2d 1439, 1448 (6th Cir. 1993) (single affidavit concerning state of mind created factual issue).

Plaintiff claims that he was denied medical attention during a seizure. The Eighth Amendment prohibits the infliction of cruel and unusual punishment against those convicted of crimes. U.S. Const. amend. VIII. The Eighth Amendment obligates prison authorities to provide medical care to incarcerated individuals, as a failure to provide such care would be inconsistent with contemporary standards of decency. Estelle v. Gamble, 429 U.S. 102, 103-04 (1976). The Eighth Amendment is violated when a prison official is deliberately indifferent to the serious medical needs of a prisoner. Id. at 104-05; Comstock v. McCrary, 273 F.3d 693, 702 (6th Cir. 2001).

A claim for the deprivation of adequate medical care has an objective and a subjective component. Farmer v. Brennan, 511 U.S. 825, 834 (1994). To satisfy the objective component, the plaintiff must allege that the medical need at issue is sufficiently serious. Id. In other words, the inmate must show that he is incarcerated under conditions posing a substantial risk of serious harm. Id. The objective component of the adequate medical care test is satisfied “[w]here the seriousness of a prisoner’s need[] for medical care is obvious even to a lay person.” Blackmore v. Kalamazoo County, 390 F.3d 890, 899 (6th Cir. 2004). If, however the need involves “minor maladies or non-obvious complaints of a serious need for medical care,” Blackmore, 390 F.3d at 898, the inmate must “place verifying medical evidence in the record to establish the detrimental effect of the delay in medical treatment.” Napier v. Madison County, Ky., 238 F.3d 739, 742 (6th Cir. 2001).

The subjective component requires an inmate to show that prison officials have “a sufficiently culpable state of mind in denying medical care.” Brown v. Bargery, 207 F.3d 863, 867 (6th Cir. 2000) (citing Farmer, 511 U.S. at 834). Deliberate indifference “entails something more than mere negligence,” Farmer, 511 U.S. at 835, but can be “satisfied by something less than acts or omissions for the very purpose of causing harm or with knowledge that harm will result.” Id.

Under Farmer, “the official must both be aware of facts from which the inference could be drawn that a substantial risk of serious harm exists, and he must also draw the inference.” Id. at 837.

Not every claim by a prisoner that he has received inadequate medical treatment states a violation of the Eighth Amendment. Estelle, 429 U.S. at 105. As the Supreme Court explained:

[A]n inadvertent failure to provide adequate medical care cannot be said to constitute an unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain or to be repugnant to the conscience of mankind. Thus, a complaint that a physician has been negligent in diagnosing or treating a medical condition does not state a valid claim of medical mistreatment under the Eighth Amendment. Medical malpractice does not become a constitutional violation merely because the victim is a prisoner. In order to state a cognizable claim, a prisoner must allege acts or omissions sufficiently harmful to evidence deliberate indifference to serious medical needs.

Estelle, 429 U.S. at 105-06 (quotations omitted). Thus, differences in judgment between an inmate and prison medical personnel regarding the appropriate medical diagnoses or treatment are not enough to state a deliberate indifference claim. Sanderfer, 62 F.3d at 154-55; Ward v. Smith, No. 95-6666, 1996 WL 627724, at *1 (6th Cir. Oct. 29, 1996). This is so even if the misdiagnosis results in an inadequate course of treatment and considerable suffering. Gabehart v. Chapleau, No. 96-5050, 1997 WL 160322, at *2 (6th Cir. Apr. 4, 1997).

As noted above, Plaintiff claims that he told Defendant Scott that he was having a seizure, but Defendant Scott failed to inform medical personnel of Plaintiff’s need for attention. In support of his motion for summary judgment, Defendant Scott offers a copy of the transit list showing that Plaintiff was transferred from the Bellamy Creek Correctional Facility (IBC) to the Chippewa Correctional Facility (URF) on July 31, 2008. (Defendants’ Exhibit B.) Defendant Scott attests that he was employed as URF as a Resident Unit Officer. On September 6, 2008, Plaintiff activated his emergency call button and began yelling. When Defendant arrived at Plaintiff’s cell,

Plaintiff showed no signs of distress and was at the door demanding his Ramadan meal. Plaintiff's meal tray was delivered a few minutes later, and Plaintiff came to the lobby to retrieve the tray. (Defendant's Exhibit C, ¶¶ 3-4.)

Defendant also attests that the posted housing unit rules state that the emergency button in the cell is to be used for emergencies only, and that Plaintiff's situation was not an emergency. Therefore, Defendant wrote a minor misconduct ticket on Plaintiff for violating a housing rule. (Defendant's Exhibit C, ¶¶ 5-7.) Defendant attaches a copy of the minor misconduct report to his brief, which shows that Plaintiff received the ticket for activating the emergency call button for a non-emergency matter. (Defendant's Exhibit D.)

As noted above, Plaintiff claims in his complaint that he was provided medical treatment for a head injury two days after his use of the emergency button as a result of Defendant's misconduct. Defendant states that this is untrue and, in support of this assertion, offers a copy of Plaintiff's medical records for the pertinent time period. The records show that Plaintiff reported to health services on September 18, 2008. During the examination, Plaintiff reported that he had experienced a mild seizure and injured his head on his bunk on September 13, 2008, more than one week after Defendant's alleged misconduct. (Defendant's Exhibit E, 9/18/08 Progress Note written by Samantha M. Belonga, R.N.)

In his response to Defendant's motion for summary judgment, Plaintiff merely reasserts the allegations set forth in his complaint. In the opinion of the undersigned, the evidence offered by Defendant shows that when Plaintiff used his emergency button on September 6, 2008, he was not experiencing a medical emergency. In addition, the medical record shows that if Plaintiff did suffer a head injury as the result of a seizure, it did not occur until September 13, 2008. There is no evidence in the record to support Plaintiff's claim that Defendant Scott denied him necessary medical care on September 6, 2008. Therefore, there is no genuine issue of material fact that Defendant violated Plaintiff's Eighth Amendment rights.

Defendant asserts that he is entitled to summary judgment on Plaintiff's official capacity claims against them because such claims are barred by the Eleventh Amendment. Any claims against the individually-named Defendant in his official capacity do not state a claim upon which relief can be granted. See Will v. Michigan Department of State Police, 491 U.S. 58 (1989) (claims against a state agency or an official in his/her official capacity are claims against the state, and are not claims against a "person" subject to Section 1983 liability); Frederick v. Abramajtyts, No. 94-1935, 1995 WL 564321, 1 (6th Cir. Sept. 21, 1995) (unpublished). Moreover, the Eleventh Amendment bars suit against the State or one of its agencies in federal court unless the state has given express consent, regardless of the relief sought. Pennhurst State School & Hospital v. Halderman, 465 U.S. 89, 100 (1984), overruled in part on other grounds, Will, 491 U.S. 58; Alabama v. Pugh, 438 U.S. 781, 782 (1978) (State and Board of Corrections).¹ The State of Michigan has not consented to civil rights suits in the federal courts. See Abick v. Michigan, 803 F.2d 874, 877 (6th Cir. 1986). The Eleventh Amendment therefore bars official-capacity suits for damages against its employees. Therefore, any official capacity claims are properly dismissed.

Defendant also claims that Plaintiff's individual capacity claims are barred by qualified immunity because Plaintiff has failed to show a violation of clearly established law. Government officials, performing discretionary functions, generally are shielded from liability for civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. Dietrich v. Burrows, 167 F.3d 1007, 1012 (6th Cir. 1999); Turner v. Scott, 119 F.3d 425, 429 (6th Cir. 1997); Noble v. Schmitt, 87 F.3d 157, 160 (6th Cir. 1996); Harlow v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 818 (1982). An “objective reasonableness” test is used to determine whether the official could reasonably have believed his conduct was lawful. Dietrich, 167 F.3d at 1012; Anderson v. Creighton, 483 U.S. 635, 641 (1987). “Qualified immunity balances two important interests—the need to hold public officials accountable when they exercise power irresponsibly and the need to shield officials from harassment, distraction, and liability when they perform their duties reasonably.” Pearson v. Callahan, 129 S. Ct. 808, 815 (2009).

In making a qualified immunity determination the court must decide whether the facts as alleged or shown make out a constitutional violation or whether the right that was allegedly violated was a clearly established right at the time of the alleged misconduct. Id. at 816. If the court can conclude that either no constitutional violation occurred or that the right was not clearly established, qualified immunity is warranted. The court may consider either approach without regard to sequence. Id. As noted above, Defendant did not violate Plaintiff’s constitutional rights. Accordingly, he is entitled to qualified immunity.

In summary, in the opinion of the undersigned, Plaintiff has failed to sustain his burden of proof in response to Defendant’s motion for summary judgment. Accordingly, it is recommended that Defendant’s Motion for Summary Judgment (Docket #23) be granted and that this case be dismissed in its entirety.

Should the court adopt the report and recommendation in this case, the court must next decide whether an appeal of this action would be in good faith within the meaning of 28 U.S.C. § 1915(a)(3). See McGore v. Wrigglesworth, 114 F.3d 601, 611 (6th Cir. 1997). For the same reasons that the undersigned recommends granting Defendant’s motion for summary judgment, the undersigned discerns no good-faith basis for an appeal. Should the court adopt the report and recommendation and should Plaintiff appeal this decision, the court will assess the $455 appellate filing fee pursuant to § 1915(b)(1), see McGore, 114 F.3d at 610-11, unless Plaintiff is barred from proceeding in forma pauperis, e.g., by the “three-strikes” rule of § 1915(g). If he is barred, he will be required to pay the $455 appellate filing fee in one lump sum.

NOTICE TO PARTIES: Objections to this Report and Recommendation must be served on opposing parties and filed with the Clerk of the Court within 14 days of receipt of this Report and Recommendation. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)©); Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b); W.D. Mich. LCivR 72.3(b). Failure to file timely objections constitutes a waiver of any further right to appeal. United States v. Walters, 638 F.2d 947 (6th Cir. 1981). See also Thomas v. Arn, 474 U.S. 140 (1985).
